the allied center

Upon the holding and ready to drive qualities of that center, the operations of the flanks have to a large extent depended, both as to its defensive capacity and its ability, by constant activity along its entire length, to force the enemy to maintain his troops against that center instead of being able to reinforce his flanks.

That the allied lines in Italy are fulfilling their task is a matter of record, "Activity on the entire front" is the tener of the week's official reports.

The arrow indicated on the map by the letter A points to the trend of operations in the western theater of war. Foch has there shortened his front and gained strategic advantages of position.

The arrow indicated by B points the direction of the through against the Bulgars. The allied objective in that
